House Flipper is actually a game that I downloaded because I thought it would be something that my wife would enjoy. I have a feeling that those who love the home creation side of The Sims will have a really awesome time with this. There are a ton of home flipping TV shows these days and I often watched them and thought: I can do it, and now thanks to this game I have a chance to prove it. Money, money and more money! The ultimate goal of House Flipper is to become rich, flipping your properties. You buy a hen-dry place, You fix it and then sell it, hopefully a ton of profit. I know I make this sound incredibly easy and simplistic, but there's actually a lot of depth that you have to do in this game. You are basically a one-man repair crew and everything lies to you! You need to buy a property, but at first you only have so much money to spend. Most properties are kind of gross and need some major TLC, and this is where your first real work comes into play. Bring in Wrecking Crew Most of the homes that you will be buying in the game need some heavy maintenance done on them before you can even think about painting walls or adding decorations. You have various tools and parts that you can use to do repairs to things like electric as well as more structural things like walls. You also have to do a lot of cleaning. Sometimes you go to the house and it is full of cockroaches and just as dirty as the local landfill. You have to wind yourself up and come to work cleaning things up. Your home is your way while you can play the game the way you want. You have budget limits to work with. So while you can buy the best kitchen countertops and the most beautiful oak floor. You have to consider that you are here to make a profit and the more money you spend on home repairs, the higher the risk, you won't make as much profit! It's a bit of a risk/reward kind of thing and one that can take a while to get the hang. I can say that actually designing houses is a lot of fun and I was impressed with how many different things it was for you to use to make each house different. The game has an intelligent progression system. As you make more money, you can get new tools, home items, and techniques that you can use to help build your home flipping empire! I was very impressed with House Flipper. I got this for my wife to enjoy, but I put a ton of time into it. I was surprised at how easy it was to get in. Trying to work within budget and make fat stacks of cash so you can buy more homes to and then flip it's really a lot of fun. 8/10 Pros: Designing houses is fun wrecking homes and cleaning them cool too! A Lot Design options you have to work as a handyman This way more exciting than you think cons: I really want them to cover the modding community Some may struggle to work within a dedicated budget!
